

In France, about 30% of women work part-time, but only 8% of men do. This is often because of the expectations to balance work and family. Women usually work fewer hours, averaging 34 hours a week, while men work around 40 hours. Many women work in education, health, and social services. Women in France earn 28.5% less than men on average.

While a cheap power adaptor that simply changes the shape of the plug will work for your computer/phone/tablet in France, it's also possible to buy a larger device called a voltage converter (pictured at the right side of the photo above) that will let you use any and all of your American electronic devices in France. These are a lot more ...
