Is North Korea building a wall near South Korea?

North Korea is building sections of what appears to be a wall in several places near its border with South Korea, new satellite images reveal.

Did North Korea build a border barrier near the DMZ?

BBC Verify commissioned high-resolution satellite imagery of a 7km stretch of the border as part of a project to look at changes North Korea was making to the area. These images appear to show at least three sections where barriers have been erected near the DMZ, covering a total of about 1km close to the eastern end of the border.

Why do North Korea's DMZ walls look like walls?

"The shape of the walls suggests that they are not just obstacles [for tanks], but are intended to divide an area," adds Dr Yang, who reviewed the satellite images. There is also evidence of land clearance within the North Korean side of the DMZ.

Do North Korea's walls look like anti-tank walls?

But recently, North Korea has been setting up walls 2-3m high, and they don't look like the anti-tank walls," Dr Yang says. "The shape of the walls suggests that they are not just obstacles [for tanks], but are intended to divide an area," adds Dr Yang, who reviewed the satellite images.

The first is that South Korea denies that any such wall even exists. This may be in part due to semantic wrangling on the definition of a wall (as opposed to, say, an anti-tank fortification), and disputing the North Korean claim that it runs a full 240km along the DMZ (which in all fairness there is limited evidence for).

Let's start with the heavy hitters. The Korean battery scene is dominated by three giants: LG Energy Solution, Samsung SDI, and SK Innovation. These companies aren't just big in Korea; they're taking over the global stage faster than K-pop. LG Energy Solution, the largest of the trio, has been making waves with its innovative battery ...
