Can African rhinos be imported into Australia?

In fact, the Australian authorities have already indicated that they will not permit the import of African rhinos without them being quarantined in a 3rd country. Australia has the 'most animal extinctions in the world', thanks to that government's primary rural focus on mining and large scale farming, at the expense of ecosystems and species.

How much does rhino conservation cost?

This mission is the first of its kind for the world's conservation efforts. The project will cost $70,000 USD per rhino and require each animal to spend several months in quarantine under the supervision of the South African and Australian Departments of Agriculture. More than a million of the iconic animals once roamed the African Savannah.
