How much energy does Taiwan use a day?

Taiwan's energy consumption the equivalent of 10.5 million kiloliters of oil, or about 2.2 million barrels a day. Consumption of petroleum products account for about half of Taiwan's energy supply equivalent of 4.5 million kiloliters of oil. Demand for diesel declined 21 percent, while that for gasoline dropped 8.7 percent.

Can Taiwan supply energy for its economy?

"They're all interested in how Taiwan can supply energy for its economy going forward -- energy that meets global goals for decarbonization," says Robert C. Armstrong, the Chevron Professor of Chemical Engineering Emeritus at MIT, as well as a principal investigator for the Taiwan Innovative Green Economy Roadmap (TIGER) program.

Is Taiwan more electricity-intensive than other countries?

Based on 2021 GDP and population numbers from the World Bank and the International Energy Agency's (IEA) most recent electricity consumption figures, Taiwan's economy is more electricity-intensive than those of its contemporaries.

Is China affecting Taiwan's long-term energy security?

This dependency on foreign energy, particularly in a region where China's influence is expanding, raises concerns about Taiwan's long-term energy security. Geopolitical tensions could disrupt supply chains, driving up costs and exacerbating energy shortages, potentially hampering Taiwan's critical industries.

Why does Taiwan have so many power outages?

Officials blame individual power outages on negligence from operators and an over-centralised grid. Taiwan's power is mostly generated in the south but is needed more in the north. Mr Lai has said he will look into ways to make energy usage more efficient.

Why does Taiwan need energy research?

Taiwan relies on imports for almost 98% of its energy, which leaves the island's energy supply vulnerable to external disruption. In order to reduce this dependence, the Ministry of Economic Affairs' Bureau of Energy has been actively promoting energy research at several universities since the 1990s.
