By choosing how we design the nanostructure, we can create materials that have novel optical properties. This gives us the ability to control and manipulate the behavior of light. Marin Soljacic A novel MIT technology is now making possible remarkably efficient photovoltaic (PV) systems that can be powered by the sun, a hydrocarbon fuel, a... Read more

Thermophotovoltaic approaches that take advantage of near-field evanescent modes are being actively explored due to their potential for high-power density and high-efficiency energy conversion.

The newly developed thermophotovoltaic cell demonstrates more than 40% efficiency at 2400 degrees Celsius. The researchers comment on their achievement, "Reaching a TPV efficiency of 40% is notable, because it means that TEGS, as well as a range of other potential applications, is now feasible. These applications include other energy storage ...

JX Crystals is a spinoff from Boeing, where world-record solar and thermophotovoltaic results were achieved. ... JX Crystals develops thermophotovoltaic cells, a technology with an incredible amount of untapped potential. Here heat alone is used to generate energy, using devices that are quiet, light-weight, and sturdy.

Thermophotovoltaic (TPV) cell generators utilize the photovoltaic effect to transform heat into electricity, seamlessly connecting to various heat sources such as high-temperature waste-heat streams, variable renewable electricity, fuels, and concentrated solar thermal systems. In TPV, radiant emission is directed toward the cold-side photovoltaic cell, ...
